I have been seeing the SBHC social worker for about 3 months. I love going to her because she makes me feel like I have a safe place to talk to someone. I also love that she does her best to fit me into her busy schedule. I would talk to her for hours, if I could. She has helped me by letting me release some of the things that go through my mind throughout the day. She has given me tips on how to handle my anger and has helped me with my grieving process. The SBHC social worker is my only person that I can confide in and I think that everyone should be able to have someone like that.
